Serving Lemon Grove and nearby communities

Safe Communities project mobilizing communities to prevent gang violence

It all began when a San Diego Juvenile Court judge contacted the county Office of Education in search of some partnership effort to curb the rise in gang-related deaths.

The result, according to Loretta Middleton, director of the office's student well-being programs, was a countywide effort which began with gathering city council members, law-enforcement officers, school counselors and others for a brainstorming session.

About 25 community leaders were invited to what was called a Safe Communities Summit, held March 1.

Middleton said about 400 people actually attended, all making a commitment to combat gang violence in their community.

Then, they met again, May 20-21 for a two day training session on how to mobilize their communities into action.

According to Eric Olsen, a Lemon Grove Middle School social worker, the session allowed participants to share ideas with those from various communities.

"In part, it was a gang-information seminar, but more than that, it was a seminar on how to get a community to mobilize," he told the Lemon Grove School District Board of Education at a recent meeting.

He said that the 13 Lemon Grove representatives, lead by group chairman Councilman Bob Burns, will hold a meeting June 16 to discuss what measures can be taken at the local level.

"This is so we can get a handle on what's going on and what alternatives there are," he added.

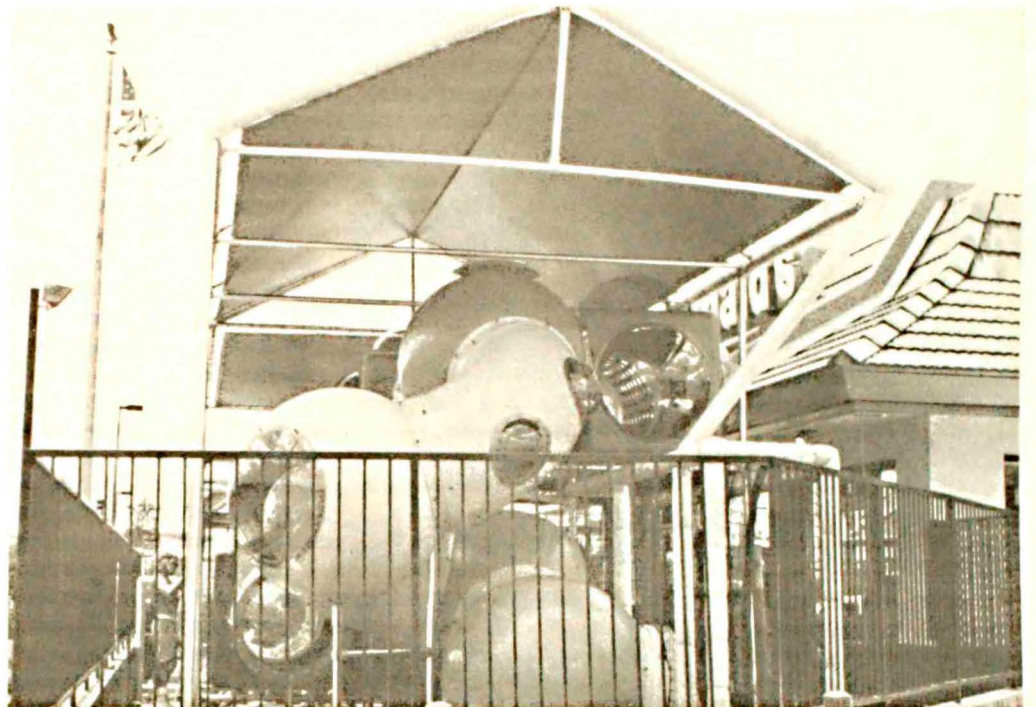

Jan LaValle, a committee member, stated that others were encouraged to join the group.

"We would like this to be as broad-based as possible," she said.

According to Middleton, several regional meetings have been planned, with the East County meeting set for today at noon, at the East County Regional Center in El Cajon.

"This will be a chance for those from various communities to report on the plans that they have made," she said.

Shortly after its inception, the program received a grant from the California Department of Education and the Attorney General's Office, and is now considered a pilot program.

The Broadway McDonalds recently renovated play area, complete with $26,000 worth of space-age play equipment, opened Monday afternoon. Owner Melissa Morrison (shown above) thinks these tubular slides and climb-throughs will pack 'em in. She also installed a canvas awning and air vents to keep the young space explorers cool.

Special budget meeting set

A special meeting of the City Council has been set for Wednesday, June 30, for the unveiling of the fiscal 1993-94 preliminary budget.

According to City Manager Jack Shelver, the special meeting is necessary due to the budget not being ready for presentation at the mid-June meeting, as is standard procedure.

The public meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the Community Center on School Lane.

We found a clown with 'culture' at the La Jolla Arts Festival

Lemon Grove's "Dolly the Clown" blended into the statuary at the arts festival last weekend. (Dolly is the large piece in the center!)

Key and Romero rose to the top of the class among Cuyamaca College graduates

During commencement ceremonies at Cuyamaca College June 1, two Lemon Grove residents were among the community college's distinguished graduates.

April Sheridan Key was noted as the only graduate with a 4.0 grade-point average, and Kenneth Romero delivered the commencement speech.

Key completed her studies at Cuyamaca last summer and begin pursuing her accounting degree at San Diego State University last fall.

A mother of college-age kids, she said she finally found the time to further her education.

"All the kids were grown up, and I decided I wanted to do more with my life," she said.

At about the same time she enrolled at Cuyamaca, she also began working at a bio-tech firm where she now works fulltime, taking classes at night.

An Oregon native, she and her family lived in Mira Mesa for a year before moving to Lemon Grove several years ago.

Romero majored in commercial art, and revamped the college newspaper while serving as its art director.

He also worked as a teacher's aide in the college's photography classes and helped design sets for Grossmont College theatre productions.

He is a member of Phi Theta Kappa, and has served as a volunteer in Cuyamaca's Heritage of the Americas museum.

He was in the Naval Reserves, and served in Desert Storm as an Arabic linguist.

Romero has already left Lemon Grove, moving to Hawaii last week where his family resides.

Zorro strikes again

Dear Editor:

As is appropriately pointed out in paragraph 3 of the lead story in your June 3 issue, I heartily agree that the sellers of spray paint, etc., should be kept behind the counter, since they are the ones who deal directly with the public; but I cannot help but feel that it would be grossly unfair to keep them in a locked cabinet, since under those conditions it would be unreasonably difficult for them to carry on the business of their employer.

Richard Van Zele
Lemon Grove

We heartily agree with Mr. Van Zele. To keep those poor merchants in a locked cabinet would make it difficult for them to conduct business. However, drastic steps are needed to defeat the graffiti vandals, so let's try it.

Casey promoted

Peter Casey of Lemon Grove has been promoted to vice president of marketing and public services at National University.

One of Casey's first major projects in his new role is to draft a strategic marketing plan for the non-traditional University, which specializes in educating working adults. Earlier, he crafted the institution's overall strategic plan.

Casey, a member of NU's administration for the past 10 years, has become somewhat of a utility player for the statewide school.

Originally hired as assistant to the president, Casey was assigned to temporarily act as dean for the School of Education, then dean of the School of Management and Business.

Also, "to find out what it was like to teach at National," Casey taught an Asian history course," he said. "I had a great time," he added. "The students were exceptional."

As vice president of marketing and public services, Casey oversees admissions, registration, financial aid, records, advertising, continuing education and English as a second language.

Before joining NU, Casey taught East Asian and African studies for four years at the University of Wisconsin and for five years at Chapman College.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Saying no to 125

If this piece sounds like a cry of "foul," then let me quickly be sure that you know to whom it is directed.

A very nice young man, named Mark Leja, has been quoted in an East County daily newspaper in a fashion that did prompt that call. It stated "all parties have agreed on the future alignment." As outline in the recent Caltrans newsletter, depicting that route and all of the "possible" off ramps and interchanges, it has been approved by the supervisors of the project in a total form. What was very distinctly left out of the article was that some facets of the plan are still to be negotiated and ARE NOT set in cement, as it were. The one very important part is the half diamond access into Lemon Grove at Troy Street.

In all of the hearings, and the discussions regarding the access into Lemon Grove, it has been very clear that we do not want it. The interchange at Ildica was long ago rejected out of hand by all concerned, so it is no longer in contention. The plan at Troy Street has also been considered at length and unanimously rejected by the Lemon Grove City Council and the people of our city. The local school district opposes it for obvious reasons, expressing primarily the same objections that the council has. To bring a massive increase in vehicle traffic off the freeway up alongside Palm Middle School and Mt. Vernon Elementary is unconscionable. Also to establish a throughway that bisects our town with traffic from East county that want a short cut to San Diego, is something we do not need, nor will we accept.

The implication by this article that we, the council, are in "agreement" with that part of the plan is false. The City Council has steadfastly opposed it and will continue to do so.

One of the "carrots" that was offered to us was a traffic light on Palm at Golden Avenue where the children must cross to the schools. We have rejected that temptation, to the tune of about $100,000 in electing to install the light at our own expense. In the light of our financial problems, this is a bold and decisive show of solidarity for what we believe.

It has been told to us that there must be an agreement between Caltrans and the city of Lemon Grove regarding the Troy Street access. If the city rejects the interchange then it will not be installed. Mr. Leja has reiterated that these negotiations will be forthcoming and the nature of Troy Street will be whatever that agreement stipulates. The headline was "It's final: SR-125 Path chosen." All of that is true except for the Troy variation. That must be approved by the City Council of Lemon Grove. I firmly believe that I can speak for the present council in saying that it will not be approved.

With the magnitude of the project, and completion being the year 2000, it may be that the intent is to wait out the present council, and pressure a subsequent governing body to approve the plan. I sincerely hope not, and will not waiver from my stand in the matter.

I would charge future council members to consider what is best for Lemon Grove first, last, and always.

If you have any questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946

Barnes Bar-B-Que

Ken Barnes of Barnes Bar-B-Que

"You've had the rest, now try the best!" is the statement made by Barnes Bar-B-Que of Spring Valley, one of the best barbecue restaurants in the county.

Featuring barbecue in the "Memphis style," friendly owner Ken Barnes has his wood burning early each day to get it just right to barbecue the best port shoulder, beef brisket, pork ribs, beef ribs, chicken, hot links and ham ... everyday, seven days a week.

Ken says that the Memphis style is a special way to cook the meats and prepare the sauce. The secret is in the seasonings. Memphis style is a dry base barbecue with the seasoning applied to the meat before cooking it over hickory or oak wood. Ken's family has been using the Memphis style for over 100 years, and Ken has brought it to Spring Valley.

Besides the exceptionally cooked meats, Barnes features some great side dishes including BBQ beans, cole slaw, red beans and rice, greens, potato salad and macaroni salads. In addition several desserts are homemade ... like sweet potato pie and tarts, apple and peach cobblers, and delicious pecan pies and tarts. You can eat the food in or have it prepared to go. (Call-in orders are happily accepted. You can even have Ken prepare a catered meal for any size group.)

Hours are Mon.-Thur. 11:30 to 9 p.m., Fri. and Sat. 11:30 to 10 p.m., and Sun. 2-7 p.m. Call 697-9616 or stop by the restaurant at 9725 Campo Rd. in Casa de Oro.

Crocheting away!

Louise Hove, age 75, a member of the Lemon Grove Lutheran Church congregation since 1955, still crochets up a storm. A retired cafeteria manager for the National City School District, she has been crocheting since she was 17, making everything from afghans to stuffed giraffes and elephants. Currently, she is working on a "Southern Belle and Southern General" doll set for her twin great-granddaughters. She says she rarely sells her creations, mostly giving them away to family and neighbors.

Eight Grossmont Hospital Junior Auxiliary members were among the first young volunteers in the nation to receive the President's Youth Service Award. The award is the highest in the nation for volunteer service and was established to honor young Americans who demonstrate outstanding community service. The eight awardees are (first row) Amy Cullifer, Amy Hovey; (second row) Katherine Shea, Michelle Hill, Jennifer Woolley; (third row) Shannon Smith, Jeremy Manahan; and (back row) Joseph Cantor. Each received a pin which bears the seal of the President of the United States, a certificate and a letter of congratulations from President Clinton.

Eight East County high school students are among the first in the nation to receive the new President's Youth Service Award. The honorees are members of Grossmont Hospital's Junior Auxiliary. They received their awards at a ceremony May 25.

Established last fall by President George Bush to "honor young Americans who demonstrate outstanding community service," the President's Youth Service Award is the "highest award for outstanding community service." The first of the honorees, which include the eight local volunteers, were informed of their awards recently.

The following are the Junior

Auxiliary members from La Mesa and Lemon Grove who received the award:

- Katherine Shea, age 18, resident of Lemon Grove, has given 433 hours to Grossmont's emergency department. After graduating from Mt Miguel High School, she will major in biology at Redlands University. She has received a full scholarship and was a third-place finalist in the national Oxy Ten scholarship competition. Shea is a past Junior of the Month.

- Shannon Smith, age 18, resident of La Mesa, began volunteering during her freshman year at Valhalla High School. She has donated more than 435 hours in the emergency room. She will attend UC Davis where she will study medicine for a career as a family practitioner.

- Jennifer Woolley, age 17, resident of La Mesa. The recipient of a $12,000 educational grant, she is planning to attend Wellesly College to pursue a degree in psycho-biology or biochemistry. She has contributed more than 440 hours to the auxiliary office, post-anesthesia recovery unit, ambulatory surgery and medical-surgical unit in the last 2 1/2 years. She has been a Junior of the month, received the La Mesa Soroptimist Scholarship, the Elks Scholarship and won the Helix Water District Essay Contest.

Commentary A question of leadership by Paul Treske

Throughout the 1992 presidential campaign, the Clinton camp constantly reminded themselves, with apparent success, that it was the economy and the deficit that stood out as vital issues. They were able to convince enough voters that they could change a stagnant and dragging economy and a sagging national spirit, to get themselves voted into office.

Since then, however, it has been a downhill ride of Republican filibusters, ill-fated appointments, over-flexibility, $200 haircuts and struggles over issues far removed from the original goals.

True, a budget has squeaked through the House (with a certainty of being roughed up in the Senate) and a mysterious National Health Plan stands on the brink of summer revelation.

But, above all, Bill Clinton has failed to do the one thing absolutely necessary for leadership: he has failed to provide a vision for the nation. Instead, he has allowed himself to be caught up and twisted and turned by the daily "nuts and bolts" of national governance.

While a divided and increasingly restive nation waits for its leader to paint them a picture of the future worth striving for, the President appears to spend his time apologizing for mistakes and dodging shots from both the political opposition and an increasingly skeptical press.

Those of us who supported the Clinton candidacy felt we saw something beyond the sometimes too facile "Slick Willie" image. We saw a nation releasing itself from an increasingly obsolete military-industrial past. A nation where citizens would willingly rebuild a moldering infrastructure; create new kinds of job opportunities with some kind of health security behind it all. We heard the word "change" and saw in our collective minds-eye, a better beginning of the 21st century.

Perhaps the concept of "change" carried with it too many diverse definitions and there was no real unanimity of what that "change" really ought to be. Perhaps, the candidate promised far too much and raised hopes too high. Perhaps the early strategy of "biting of the bullet," raising taxes and allowing gays in the military was too much for everyone. But, whatever the reason, the man has simply shown us no leadership vision of a world we'd like to live in and that is his greatest failure.

Perhaps Ronald Reagan knew more of "leadership" than we understood. While he dozed and left the "details" to his subordinates, he kept painting for us a picture of a kind of world. While others dealt with the nuts and bolts, he dealt with the ideology. We may have agreed or disagreed with that ideological stand, but it created an aura and a vision and that, I believe, is the absolute hallmark of the leader. Roosevelt had it, as did John Kennedy. Jimmy Carter did not and fell victim to the same strangling details that are now engulfing Bill Clinton.

I don't know if the current White House occupant really has a definitive vision of the future, but this I do know: If he is, indeed, capable of re-inspiring us with a peek at an exciting and fruitful future, he'd better do it soon or he will no longer be able to climb out of his deepening pit of self-inflicted wounds. Without a show of national leadership, this good and well-meaning man will become just another in a long line of one-term presidents whose electioneering skills far outweighed their actual abilities to lead.

From Where I Sit

A few odd jobs

by Frank Andrews

A few days after my kids and I hit town, I was out looking for a job. I had been in the painting and decorating business up in Minnesota but the San Diego area was in the midst of a building trades strike, so working at my trade was out at least for a while.

Just by chance I stopped into the Frazee Company warehouse and general offices in Mission Valley. Mr. Bob Frazee and his son Nick invited me to lunch. After listening to my story including my experience in the painting business, I was hired and started to work for them immediately.

I was required to put in some time working in their several stores around the county to get acquainted with their products. In just a short time I was given the job of outside salesman, a new station wagon and an expense account to go with it.

My first territory for the company was calling on auto paint and body shops in San Diego County. It was all "Greek" to me as I never had any experience in automobile finishing. After only a few months of calling on auto paint shops and watching the pros, I, too, became proficient at spray painting cars and trucks. I had to demonstrate our products to the many shops and did sell lots of paint and equipment.

When it was known that I could spray paint, I was offered several off-hour moonlighting jobs. I sold Zolotone, a multicolor paint, to Modern Septic Systems in El Cajon to paint their portable toilets that they rented to construction projects. As soon as the owner, Noble Herricks, had a few new or redo "outhouses," I'd get a call and would end up working on Saturday and Sunday.

Another customer that bought truck painting materials from me was Erreca Water Company in Spring Valley. The company bought used or surplus road watering trucks from the armed forces. A San Diego ordinance requires that the surface of the area had to be watered while grading in order to keep the dust down to a minimum. That service was offered by Erreca, and I was the one that did the painting of the old trucks.

Nearly every Saturday morning I was climbing over the rusted vehicles, grinding and sanding all the rust and grime off of them. I would then prime the big trucks and tanks with a rust-proof primer. On Sunday mornings I was there, again, to spray the yellow Kem Transport enamel. The work was hard and dirty but the pay was good, so I stuck it out for several months.

The nicest moonlighting job (but for less pay) was the time I worked for San Diego Caterers of Point Loma helping out as a bartender and all-around cook and bottle washer. I can remember working for a party given by an airline pilot. The money wasn't too great, but the "all I could eat" seafood was terrific. The host had tons of seafood flown in, mostly from the East Coast. I shucked oysters and clams until my hands felt real "clammy." My motto was, "shuck one, eat two."

I finally quit all my "moonlighting" and settled down to my main job of selling paint and associated products to make a decent living.

Letter to the Editor

An open letter to the community:

Are you fed up with the panhandling going on in our fair city? Are you tired of offers to wash your car windows as you hurry in or out of a local market? Are you weary of folks asking for a handout who look in better shape than many of the rest of us? The courts don't seem to care, so we must solve our own problem.

Ignore them as nicely and firmly as you can. Don't let them intimidate you. There are agencies to take care of the truly needy and hungry. Your tax dollars are already paying for such services. You need not feel guilty.

Most of the people you see on the parking lot or on the curb are scam artists and they play the game well. If you want them to go elsewhere, you have the key. Keep your money in your pocket and keep on walking. If they can't make it here, they will move on. If you can't resist someone who is hungry, offer to buy them a bowl of soup. They don't want soup, they want cash.

These are people who are milking the system every way they can. They collect money they don't declare, they don't pay taxes, and they are getting a free ride at our expense. In fact, have a heart for the man who is trying to bring customers into his shop. We don't need another empty building, what we need is to be able to stroll around our community without being hassled. So, the ball is in your court, let's see what we can do, together.

Remember, the only reason beggars stay at certain corners, is because the "picking is good there."

Charles wins scholarship

Three students from San Diego State University's College of Engineering each received $1,500 scholarships from the Society of American Military Engineers (SAME), San Diego Post. The students are Lori Charles of Lemon Grove, mechanical engineering; Jay Gabrielson of El Cajon, civil engineering; and Richard Hanson of San Diego, civil engineering. They were recognized and received scholarship awards from John Knutzen, president of SAME San Diego Post.

The society annually recognizes students based on academic achievements, professional activities, and work experience. In addition, students were asked to write a 500-word essay on "What will be the major architectural/engineering concern in the year 2000?"
